

What Is An Adjective?

Adjectives are describing words. They add extra information to a sentence to make it more exciting and more interesting.

Adjectives can go in two positions in English.

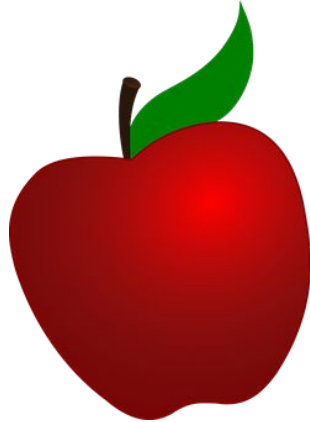

In front of a noun

I like dark chocolate

This is a red apple

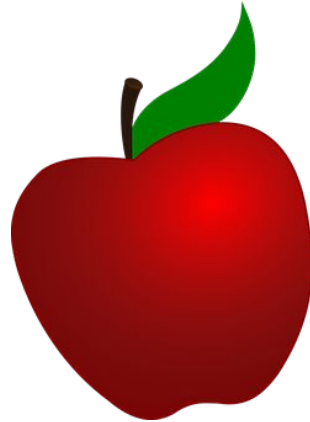

Or after a linking verb

The chocolate is dark

This apple is red

A linking verb is a special type of verb in English. The most common examples are to be, to seem and to look, but there are hundreds of linking verbs. You simply need to learn if a verb is a linking verb.

Sometimes we use more than one adjective in a sentence. When this happens, the adjectives must go in a very specific order. Watch our video in the next activity to learn about this.
