

To, Too and Two

One of the most common mistakes in English (even by native speakers) is using the word "to" incorrectly.

To

This is a preposition and it is used in numerous situations

1) To provide a destination

Let's go to the cinema.

2) To receive something

I gave my phone to my daughter.

3) In expressions of time

It's twenty to four.

4) To talk about reactions or responses

The solution to our problem is to lower the prices.

5) With verbs (as a prepositional verb or phrasal verb)

I listen to music regularly.

6) With adjectives (as a prepositional adjective)

I am excited to start this project.

This is also part of the infinitive form of a verb.

1) Some verbs must always be followed by to + infinitive. For example, want, need, would like.

I want to watch this film.

2) When using the infinitive form we sometimes include to.

To be or not to be, that is the question!

Too

This is an adverb and it has two meanings.

1) This means "as well", "also" and goes at the end of sentence.

I like music. Me too!

2) The quantity is greater than you want.

There are too many sweets.

Two

This is a number that provides a quantity of something.

I have two rabbits.
