Now you're going to read a film review of The King's Speech!

Films

The King's Speech is a historical drama, it was released back in 2011 in the UK although it premiered over in the US slightly earlier in 2010. It was directed by Tom Hooper, the screenplay was written by David Seidler and it was produced by Ian Canning, Emile Sherman and Gareth Unwin. The film is based on real life events of the British royal family. The plot follows the abdication of Edward VIII back in 1936 who left the role for his American love and this leads to the ascent to the throne of his younger brother George VI, who is actually the father of our current head of state our current Queen Elizabeth II. George VI actually had a speech impediment and he was very uncomfortable giving speeches, didn't really enjoy speaking publicly.

The film focuses on the relationship between the two main characters - King, George VI, who is played by Colin Firth and Geoffrey Rush who plays Lionel Logue, the speech therapist. There are lots of other great supporting actors too.

Films

The film is mostly set in London and most of it was shot on location. They used Ely cathedral to represent Westminster Abbey, they used parts of Lancaster House to represent the insides of Buckingham Palace and lots of other sorts of magnificent buildings to give off this idea that they lived and worked in Buckingham Palace. So, there were lots of places involved but it was all filmed and recorded here in the UK.

This film was a box office hit on all fronts. They received 12 Oscar nominations the year after it was released and they won four of those including the big prizes really. They got best picture, Colin Firth won best actor, they also got best director, best screenplay. It won nominations and awards at the BAFTAs, The Golden Globes, The Screen Actors Guild Awards, it won the People's Choice Award in 2010 and it was just generally a huge success across all fronts. Interestingly, it wasn't a big-budget film. The film was originally made for just £8 million although that did turn into a rather profitable £250 million. Even in the first weekend alone here in Great Britain and Ireland it made £3.5 million and it remained the most successful film in the box office for four weekends running.

Films

The film music and soundtracks in this film are also breathtaking. The score was composed through Decca records and was also nominated for best original score at the Oscars, at the BAFTA's, at the Golden Globes and it even won a Grammy too, so pretty good soundtrack.

Films

- 1) Have you ever seen the King's Speech?
- 2) Do you think you'd watch it?
- 3) Have you seen these actors before?
- 4) Are you a fan of film soundtracks?

One of the most highly anticipated films of all time has recently come out. The main character is played by my favourite actor and the film is loosely based on a book written 20 years ago.

I saw a theatrical version of this book last year, where the characters acted out some of the scenes and I loved it.

I've talked to my mum and we've decided to go for it and watch it this weekend together. I've already booked our tickets online - front row seats! I'm very excited to watch it. I just hope it lives up to my expectations!
